Harry Potter cast a spell on readers around the world...Now let Lucknam Park cast its spell on you

Fly to Lucknam Park for the weekend, from just £215 per room per night.

Lucknam Park cannot provide Quidditch games, and sadly a sorting hat will not determine which room you stay in. However, they can provide 500 acres of rolling Wiltshire countryside, an 18th Century Palladian mansion and the location for the filming of Harry Potter less than a fifteen minute drive away.

Lucknam Park itself is truly magical, and gives guests the opportunity to experience all that epitomises a luxurious country house weekend. Guests can indulge in a series of pampering treatments in the dedicated spa set in the beautiful grounds. Alternatively, they can swim in the large indoor pool, use the steam room, sauna and gym or ride one of the horses from the hotels highly respected equestrian centre.

After all this relaxation a little sightseeing must be on the cards, and a visit to the spellbinding village of Lacock, could not provide a more quintessentially English outing. Lacock, an evocative medieval Wiltshire village just a few miles from Lucknam played host to the characters of Harry Potter as they filmed the interior Hogwarts scenes in the famous Lacock Abbey.

Having worked up an appetite, Lucknam Park's award-winning chef Robin Zavou will weave some magic of his own, with his mouthwatering a la carte menu.

Like, reading a JK Rowling novel a weekend at Lucknam Park provides the perfect escape.

Note to Editors : JK Rowling's new book is to be released on the 21st June.
